ENFORCING DRY LAW IS UP TO LOCAL OFFICERS

State Has Next Responsibility, Says Federal Agent—Methods for Further Coordination Will Be Taken Up

WOULD MAKE DRY LAWS MORE UNIFORM

By Associated Press.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 19.—Responsibility for the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment is first with the municipal and county officials, then with state officials, according to Roy A. Haynes, federal prohibition commissioner. Sam Collins, federal prohibition director for Kentucky, is in receipt of advice from Commissioner Haynes containing the foregoing principle.

Methods for further coordination of federal, state and local enforcement agencies will be discussed at a conference of governors in Washington Saturday, Mr. Collins said.

"It is contemplated by the Eighteenth Amendment that the smaller violations be handled by local agencies, sources of supply, fraudulent withdrawals, etc., be handled, in the main, by federal authorities," Commissioner Haynes said in his message to Mr. Collins.

"One of the vital problems is the proper coordination of the various agencies, and Commissioner Haynes is gratified that in addition to the ratification of the Eighteenth Amendment and passage of appropriate enforcement legislation by forty six states, progressive legislation has, within the past year, been adopted by twenty-eight states. In Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland and Mississippi the legislatures did not meet, while attempts in Alabama, Connecticut, Delaware, Georgia, Illinois, Ohio and Wisconsin to weaken, modify or repeal state codes, by legislation or referendum failed," Mr. Collins said

Effective Paddock Laws

"A summary of recent legislation shows that in the states of Arizona, Arkansas and Florida acts were passed penalizing persons who operate motor vehicles while intoxicated, while in Iowa, Vermont and Virginia, penalties previously provided for this offense were increased. The legislatures of Colorado and Ohio strengthened their 'padlock' laws, which has proved such an effective weapon in the hands of enforcement officals throughout the country, while the new law which superseded the Woner Act in Pennsylvania provides for drastic 'padlock' proceedings. This new law also provides for the abolition of licenses for so-called saloons and three year penitentiary sentences for first offenders.

Increased penalties for second violations were provided by legislation passed in Vermont and Virginia. Several states enacted legislation during the last year making the purveyor of liquor from the drinking of which death results, guilty of murder. The states passing such legislation are Florida Illinois, Minnesota, Missouri, Ohio and Tennessee.

State Laws Different

The first offense of possessing or using a still for manufacturing liquor was declared to be a felony in Indiana, Kansas, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon and West Virginia, while the Washington legislature strengthened this provision of the law. Maine enacted legislation making conspiracy to sell intoxicating liquor a felony for the first offense, while Minnesota made the same provision with regard to the sale of liquor to a minor. The legislatures of Indiana, Oregon and Texas made it a penitentiary offense for liquor law violators to carry concealed weapons. Maine, Montana and Pennsylvania enacted legislation providing for the seizure of vehicles containing liquor, while Florida strengthened her search and seizure laws, increasing the penalties. Laws were enacted in Nebraska and Wyoming strengthening the provisions of the state code with reference to the removal of derelict officials. The South Carolina legislature passed an act empowering the governor to appoint deputies, constables and detectives to aid in enforcement. Nebraska enacted legislation making the destruction of evidence prima facie evidence of guilt. North Dakota eliminated the weak features of the state code, and adopted a resolution petitioning Congress not to weaken the National Prohibition Act. California and North

WOMAN'S CLUB TO MEET MONDAY

To Outline Club's Program for Year in First Meeting in Renovated Library Rooms

The Middlesboro Woman's Club will hold its opening meeting of the year at its room in the library, at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon. This will be a general business meeting and plans for the entire year will be taken up and discussed. A full attendance is particularly requested for this meeting, so that the members may get in line for the big program planned by the Club this year. Mrs. D. G. Hinks, president, will be in charge.

Preparations will be made, too, for participation in the district Woman's Club conference which will be held in Pineville November 1 and 2 at which seven or eight state officers will be present, including Mrs. B. W. Bayless of Louisville, president of the state Federation of Woman's clubs. Middlesboro women will go to Pineville on Thursday, Thursday night and Friday and they are planning to entertain the conference visitors here Friday night.

The library room, in which school was held last year, has been repaired and redecorated by the city, making it a very attractive meeting place. The woodwork has been painted in all of these rooms, new doors have replaced the old and the general renovation is indeed commendable.

RULES FOR WEDDED BLISS SUPPLIED WITH LICENSES

Associated Press

CENTERVILLE, Mich., Oct. 19.—County Clerk John Niendorf of St Joseph County believes that a county clerk's responsibility does not end with the issuance of marriage licenses. He has had printed a supply of card, containing his rules for a successful marriage, and each couple is given one.

One side of the card carries the county clerk's blessing: "May all your days be as happy as your wedding day."

On the reverse side appear ten "rules" to insure happy marriages. They are:

"Keep up the courtship. Go 50-50 on the money and 50-50 on the love. Make your own home and don't live with relatives. Beware the boarder and don't be a lightwad."

"They're all good rules," Niendorf said. "I have tried them in my own home, and I know."

L. & N. WATER SUPPLY AT PINEVILLE IS VERY LOW

The water supply of the L. & N. at Pineville is now so limited that grave concern is being felt by the officials as to methods of securing water when the present three pumping stations fail to furnish the needs for the trains. It is estimated that only about a week's supply of water is ahead, unless it rains abundantly within the week. The pumping stations are used alternately daily but even by doing this the supply is expected to be exhausted soon.

Virgil Y. Moore Will Speak at City Hall at 7:30 p. m., if Rain Continues

The Republican rally at 7:30 o'clock tonight, at which Virgil Y. Moore, Madisonville attorney, will be chief speaker, will probably be held in the court room of the city hall because of the inclement weather. If, however, it clears off and is fairer, the meeting will be held at the public square.

The speaker is a member of the Republican state central committee and is one of the most successful young lawyers in western Kentucky. He is regarded as one of the rising figures in Republican state politics and is recommended by the speaking committee as one of the best orators in the state. He was graduated several years ago from the University of Kentucky.

ALL K. U. VEHICLE DRIVERS MUST OBEY SAFETY RULING

Announcement that all Kentucky Utilities trucks, autos, and other vehicles must stop at all railroad crossings and make certain that no trains are approaching before driving on was made by W. C. SALVATION ARMY HELPS OLD WOMAN FIND SON

The Salvation Army again is called upon to give an old lady 88 years old a lift. She was without a home, no place to go, but she has two sons somewhere, and was traveling hither and yonder, trying to locate them. So she came to the Salvation Army with her story and they gave her shelter and food while they were trying to locate her sons. Through the efforts they put forth they were rewarded by locating one in White Bluff, Tenn. Then she was placed on the train and started journey rejoicing, knowing she would soon see her long lost boy, and they would be reunited again.—Contributed.

MY OWN MAY RUN FOR ZEV TOMORROW

Derby Winner Develops Skin Malady Which Will Probably Prevent Entrance in $100,000 International Race

GRAYSON'S HORSE IN TOP CONDITION, EXPERTS SAY

Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Zev has developed a skin malady which may prevent him from carrying America's colors in the $100,0000 race with Papyrus tomorrow, it was learned today. The Jockey Club's race committee, however, after an inspection of the horse, indicated they would withhold decision, pending the arrival of My Own, which is on his way here to take Zev's place if necessary. The malady affecting Zev assumed proportions in an epidemic at Belmont park where three barns were hit and every precaution taken to prevent it reaching the stable where Papyrus is located. Just how seriously Zev is affected could not be learned. He worked a half mile in :47 3-5 this morning but trainer Sam Hildreth admitted he was worried over his charge's condition.

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 19.—My Own, Admiral T. Grayson's crack three-year-old, left here on a special train for Belmont park prepared to take Zev's place in the international race tomorrow with Papyrus if need be. About an hour before the colt left for New York he was taken out for a workout. With a strong pull on the reins he stepped a half mile in :53; three-quarters mile in 1:17; and a mile in 1:43. My Own is in top condition and experts say fit to run the race of his life.

JUDGE MANRING IN RACE TO FINISH

Outlines Course He Will Pursue if Elected Commissioner of Middlesboro

Asked this morning in regard to the rumors that he had contemplated withdrawing from the race for city commissioner, Judge J. L. Manring stated that he had no such intentions, and that he was in the race in earnest. He said that he was a candidate not because of ambitions desires for himself, but had announced at the insistence of his friends and with the single purpose of serving the city.

"In announcing his policies, Judge Manring stated:

"I believe in, and will stand for economy in the administration of the city affairs, but not in misplaced economy that would lower the present high standard of our schools, or put a stop to street improvement, and refuse to contribute to charity, good schools, good streets, and other necessary improvements which are essential to the growth and prosperity of the city. Money wisely and judiciously expended in their behalf, is real economy.

"We shall soon have streets and avenues of which any city in the land would be proud, but they must be kept clean and in good repair. I also favor the appointment of a motor traffic officer, whose duty would be to put a stop to reckless driving by arresting all speed maniacs found driving cars. Automobiles and motor trucks in the hands of reckless and inefficient drivers, are a menace to the citizens, and as I believe in Safety first, I would prefer removing the danger before the sacrificing of any lives.

"I am not the candidate of any victim, party, or administration, and if elected shall take office unpledged, except to the citizens. I believe myself to faithfully serve their best interests to the best of my ability. I shall favor equal and exact justice to rich and poor alike and a square deal to everybody. If elected, I shall insist on the greatest economy in the city affairs, consistent with the proper preservation and improvement of present standards, and I believe that taxes should be kept down to the lowest possible level, consistent with the city's best interests. I do not believe in lessening the appropriations for our schools, and charities, but would insist that for every dollar expended, there should be full value received.

"I believe in active co-operation with the business interests of the city, and shall aid and forward that

SAYS SENTIMENT OF COUNTRY DRY

Senator Moses, After Swing Through East and Middle West, Sure of This, But Laughs at Volstead

Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—Senator Moses of New Hampshire after a swing through 12 eastern and Middle West States, visited the White House today, and announced that the Volstead act was a "Jackass Statute." He said it was necessarily that because it declares "buttermilk to be an alcoholic beverage," he asserted. However, he found the sentiment of the country dry even though rum running trucks from Canada are "more numerous than trains over the Boston and Maine railroad."

HOME PIPED FOR LIQUOR FOUND BY FIRE CREW

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Fire in a four-story brown brown stone mansion in Brooklyn today led police to a very elaborate distilling plant.

In the basement was a 50-gallon still, on the second floor a 100-gallon still and on the third floor was another 100-gallon outfit. The building, from basement to roof, was piped elaborately and had pumps, siphons and spigots.

Three thousand gallons of alcohol, 2,600 gallons of mash, a ton of sugar and a mahogany saloon bar was found.

One room, furnished for living, apparently had been vacated shortly before firemen arrived. In it were the clothing of a man, a woman and a boy and girl. On a table lay receipts which indicated the monthly gas bill for the still had been $50 to $60, until the moonshiners tapped the main and piped around the meter.

BABE RUTH, WORLD'S SERIES OVER, GOES OFF HUNTING

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—The call of the wild has reached the ears of Babe Ruth, many of his Yankee teammates and an equal number of his erstwhile Giant rivals, now that the greatest world's series has become a chapter in baseball history.

Miramichi, New Brunswick, where the big game differs considerably from the big game of a world series, is to become Babe's tramping ground within the next week, according to his present plans. There, armed with a rifle instead of his trusty bat, and accompanied by Hugie Jennings, the Giants' field manager, who for the time will change his famous "E-e-e Yah," into a moose call, the Bambino will endeavor to collect trophies for the already well-filled den of his New England country home.

BEL LCOUNTY NOT ONE 20 KENTUCKY PAUPER COUNTIES

It is gratifying to find in listing the "pauper" counties of Kentucky that Bell nor Harlan county neither one appear this year. Twenty-nine counties were listed in the "pauper" class, with expenses running higher than revenue, in the annual report made to Governor Edwin P. Morrow, by John J. Craig, state auditor. This represents a decrease of 50 counties since 1920, according to Arthur Doyle, deputy state auditor.

The counties listed were Adair, Breathitt, Butler, Carter, Casey, Clay, Clinton, Elliott, Floyd, Green, Jackson, Knott, Knox, Larue, Leslie Lewis, Martin, Menifee, Metcalfe, Monroe, Morgan, Owsley, Perry, Pulaski, Rockcastle, Rowan, Russell, Whitely and Wolfe.

BIBLE READING INCREASES WITH EVERY PASSING YEAR

Associated Press

LONDON, Oct. 19.—People are reading the Bible today more than ever before, says the Daily Telegraph, which quotes figures of the British and Foreign Bible Society to support its assertions.

There was an increase in the number of Bibles published in the English and Welsh languages during the war, followed by a decrease after the close of hostilities. The year 1922 again showed an increase, however, which points to a "revival of Bible reading in the homeland."

Significant of the world-wide influence of the Bible are the society's figures of their issues in all languages for the past century and a quarter. The figures are summaries of totals at intervals of 25 years, and include Bibles, Testaments, and portions of the Scriptures:

1808....	81,158	1883....	2,964,636
1823....	536,811	1908....	5,688,381
1858....	1,602,187	1922-23....	8,679,284

GOVERNORS IN SPLIT DEBATING ON PROHIBITION

Finally Adopt Resolution Pledging Coolidge Fullest Co-operation in Enforcement of Dry Law

PARKER O FLOUISIANA LEAVES THE CONFERENCE OVER MATTER

Associated Press

WISTRADEN, Oct. 19.—The conference of governors was disrupted today by a debate on prohibition and scenes unprecedented in 15 years of organization marked the closing session. The split came when it wa announced the memorial to be presented to President Coolidge was ready for signatures.

Governor Blaine of Wisconsin urged the discussion of methods for enforcing the Volstead Act, instead of "proclaiming we are virtuous men and good governors." He added he wa supposed to the Eighteenth amendment. Governor Parker of Louisiana declared me would resign from the conference if a single name wa sattached to the memorial. He declared the Ku-Klux klan was the greatest issue before the people and that the question demands the attention of this meeting instead of mere words on the eighteenth amendment." Governor Neff, of Texas, said the memorial would go to the President "with the signature of the largest unit of this republic, to proclaim to every bootlegger an devery distiller that this law will be enforced. The upshot was the adoption of a formal resolution pledging President Coolidge the fullest coeperation in enforcement of prohibition, accompanied by a tumult of ssouting during which Governor Parker left the meeting.

STUDENT LOAN FUND AIDS NEEDY STUDENTS

By Associated Press.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 19.—Students who have long wanted a course in higher education, but were unable to finance such an undertaking, need no longer feel that a barrier as the Student Loan Fund of the University of Kentucky, which gives aid to needy and deserving students, has been swelled to a considerable size by recent contributions.

The most recent contribution came to the fund when the West Kentucky Coal Company of Paducah, Ky., donated $1,000. The Student Loan Fund is periodically increased by contributions from the Southern Railway Company.

The Student Loan Fund is a sum of money set aside for the purpose of allowing students to complete their college courses, who could not otherwise do so. By making proper application to the loand fund committee, the student is granted a loan sufficient for his purpose, payable at his convenience and without interest. Many students at the University of Kentucky avail themselves of this offer and are enabled to stay in school. The recent contributions have swelled the fund to a total of $25,000.

Not in the history of the institution has there been a case of defaulted payment.

A THOUGHT

What are these wounds in thine hands? Then he shall answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends.—Zech. 13:6.

Animals are such agreeable friends—they ask no questions. They pass no criticisms.—George Eliot.

JUDGE MANRING FOR CITY COMMISSIONER

Of the six men who are in the race for nomination as city commissioner Judge Manring stands out as a capable and competent leader and business man who combines all the requisites for making a good commissioner. He has been tried in the past and not found wanting, and his past record as a successful business man, one who has acquired a competence without even a suspicion of having taken an unfair advantage o this official position certainly goes far in securing the confidence of the voters in his business ability and integrity.

Judge Manring did not wish to enter the race. It was only through the insistence o this friends that he allowed his name to be placed on the ballot. These friends have insisted it was a duty he owed the city for past favors and honors tendered him, that he should give of his time and his talent to the business of the city in the capacity as city commissioner. The future is to be judged by the past, and judging from the past achievements o Middlesboro through the untiring efforts of Judge Manring who has carefully and consistently worked for the city, we feel positively sure that no better move for the continued development and prosperity of Middlesboro could be made than the selection o Judge Manring as one of our city commissioners.

The voters of Middlesboro should take into consideration all these factors. They should realize that the task of the city commissioner is a tremendous one, requiring a high degree of business ability and a long and successful business training. To make an experiment of the office i dangerous to the welfare of our city. Let us select men for the office whose administration will be an assured success from the very beginning.

WHAT THE DOCTORS ARE DOING

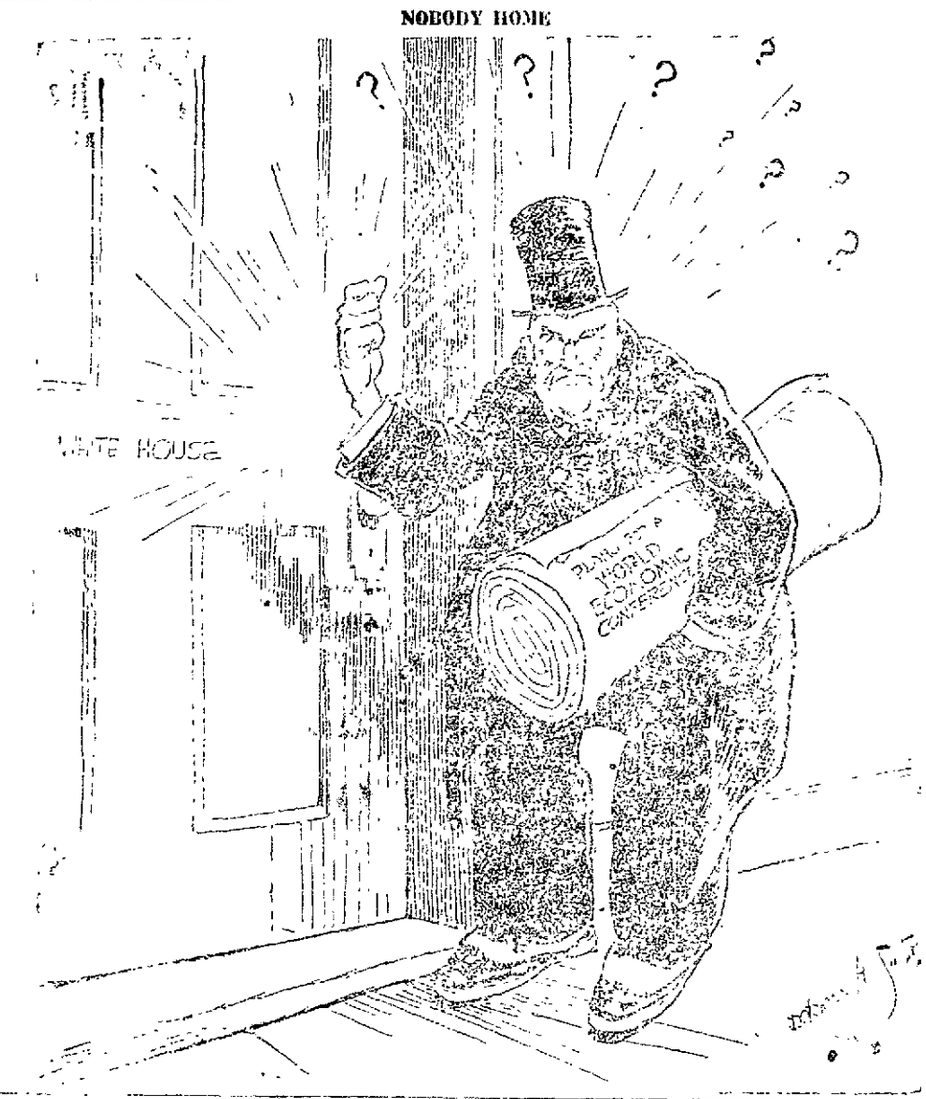
There was a time, not so long ago as not to be recalled by many of those yet living, when certain infections and contagious diseases were epidemic incharacter, and that resulted year by year in a prodigious number of deaths of men, women and children. Reference is had specially to yellow fever, cholera and smallpox. These have been virtually conquered. It has been done by the doctors.

The death rate from tuberculosis has been reduced, and today typhoid fever plays a comparatively small part in mortality. Scarlet fever once was regarded as incurable, but the doctors have discovered methods of prevention and of cure—infant mortality has been notably reduced. The doctors of our time have studiously worked for the prevention of disease and have found better methods for curing. Strange as it may seem, the doctors are making for themselves what has the appearance, not for more, but less work.

In some of the walks of life there are those who do their work mechanically for years without for a moment thinking if there isn't a way for doing it easier and better. Such as these are simply machines subject as are other manmade machines to the wear and the tear of time. The end comes, the machine wears out and goes into the scrap-heap.

The effort of every one, be he a doctor, lawyer, teacher, mechanic, common laborer, or one who teaches from the pulpit or desk of the church school, be it quality rather than quantity. In all the walks of life, profiting what has been said by another the effort should be: "To replace habit if one by enthusiasm, to intrigue the worker's self interest in the task he is performing to make the worker vitally interested in the vicissitudes and problems that confront the management, is a problem which is approaching solution."

That seems to be the thought of the doctors who are devoting their time so earnestly in the prevention of as in curing disease.—Journal and Tribune.



Tom Sims Says

Now that the world series is over footballers come to pass.

Football players are among the few who are cheered for kicking.

Zuppke of Illinois is a football coach even if he does sound like a foreigner asking for soup.

While Zuppke writes football plays he is not a playwrite. He writes so they won't play wrong.

Best football players come from the broad open spaces where men are men and women are girls.

While the football season ends on Thanksgiving this is not the original excuse for Thanksgiving.

Learning football is no easy matter. Arguing with traffic cops and ice men is fine training.

Excellent way to learn football is by kicking every lap-dog you see and then running.

Football players must be tough. They must be tough as cafe steaks. Eating cafe steaks will help them.

Never feed a football player on raw meat. It is dangerous. He may bite off his girl's nose.

Looking for needles in haystacks will train a football player's eyes to see the point.

Best way to train a footballer is make him fall in love. Then he will fight like a bedbug.

Football is better than golf. Everybody knows where the ball is.

What's a little rouge between a girl and her football hero? Nothing, if it is on her lips.

Footballers must know open field running. Dodging auos helps in this. Never stiff-arm a limousine.

Everybody should know football. A good football player can trip a collector and step in his face.

Football enables one to kick a burglar in the eye and take his watches and pocketbook.

Women should learn football. It would help in bargain counter rushes and opening tight windows.

Never play football with your mouth open. When you brush your teeth you may find an extra ear.

Teach the family football. No neighbor would dare talk about a family of football players.

Buy the babe a football. Tell him football players don't cry. Saves you lots of singing.

This whole town needs football. If everybody could kick everybody, they wouldn't have to do it

Berton Braley's Poem

NOT LOST

Fled, you say, in old Romance,
And the bloom is off the rose?
Juliets and Romeos
Haven't, nowadays, a chance,
So you look on quite askance.
And you shake your head and frown
Watching Romeo advance,
Calling "Hi, Kid, come on down!"

Careless, slangy words, it's true:
Yet to Juliet, above,
They are growing words of love,
Just as sweet to listen to
As Verona's garden knew
When, in days of long ago,
Whispering the foliage through,
Juliet heard Romeo!

What if Romeo drives a car?
Or if flapper Juliet
Sometimes smokes a cigaret,
In these "humdrum days that are?"
Still, she is his shining star,
He's her knight of high renown,
When he sings out from afar,
"Hi there, Julie, come on down!"

HOW CAN A POOR MAN GET AHEAD?

The Story of an Engineer Who Never Saved A Cent Until He Was Almost 40, Then Became Rich

"I never saved a penny until I was almost 40 years old," said a civil engineer, who is now wealthy and a large holder of apartment houses and rental property. "I got a fair salary, and spent it all. One day the company gave me a small bond as a bonus. It made me sore. I wanted the bonus in money. I'd have to go to a little trouble to spend the bond, so I kept it. After a while I discovered I hadn't missed not spending that money. The little semi-annual interest came in. I got interested. At almost 40 I got the saving and investing habit. That's more than 20 years ago now and here's how I figure my returns since I became an inventor, and later, my own boss:

"Bonds, 100 per cent, meaning that interest received and increased values have doubled every penny I ever saved and put into bonds.

"Real Estate, 60 per cent, meaning that rents, rent saved and increased value of that property have paid me back $16 for $10 that I invested. I bought my first real estate years ago with the aid of bonds that doubled me to obtain the loan.

"Mortgages, 50 to 60 per cent, meaning that every penny that I have saved and lent on property has returned in a period of years a sum equal to half the amount invested, or more.

"My first investments were guided by good advice, that of an executive of a big corporation for which I worked. He showed me that, although I couldn't at first invest only small sums, there is a safe bond for every investor and saver. There's no excuse for anyone accepting an inferior security. I've never tried to speculate; result, never lost a penny."

BORAH WANTS U. S. TAXES REDUCED

Says Next Congress Must Take Matter up or Nation's Burden Will Be Increased

Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Senator Borah of Idaho today announced he was very much in favor of a drive in the next congress to reduce the nation's tax burden. He declared that if they did not do that the nation was likely to drift into a program of increased taxes.

The Tangle

AN INTIMATE STORY OF INNERMOST EMOTIONS REVEALED IN PRIVATE LETTERS

I caught my breath sharply when the man said he would give me three thousand dollars apiece. I wondered if I had a right to sell them. I wondered if Alice knew their value. Surely he could not have known it, nor the person who sold them to me. Where in the world would this mystery end?

I decided to cable Alice immediately. I would not wait for a letter. In the meantime if I sold three of the lot, with one that was lost, I would have taken twelve thousand dollars from someone who really owned them. Until I knew something about it, was I doing something dishonest to sell them?

Then there came to me Little Marquis, the sight of my husband's face and I knew just the trouble he was in. I decided this once to take a leaf out of John's book, provide for the present and let the future take care of itself.

Silently I handed the stones to the broker and asked him to arrange the clasp again on the depleted string.

"Shall I give you a check, my dear young lady?" he asked, looking at me rather peculiarly.

"I would rather have the money," I answered.

The man sent a boy out to a nearby bank and soon I had nine thousand dollars in my hand. I put the pearls and the money in my bag and was leaving hurriedly when the broker suggested "If you will allow me to advise you, I would not carry these stones in that careless way. Why don't you put them around your neck? You can let them drop down under your blouse." I took his advice and started for the station, and then realized that I was very hungry. I had nothing to eat all day. I went into a modest restaurant where, to my surprise, I found in one corner of the room very much engrossed in each other, Ruth Ellington and Wilbur Burke.

Ruth's consternation was quite as great as mine and yet I felt that in some odd way she was relieved, for she came to my table quickly.

"I'm so glad to see you, Leslie dear," she said. "Are you going back home tonight? If so, may I go with you?"

Mr. Burke said nothing, but I knew he was very much annoyed when I answered, "I'm going just as soon as I can get a little something to eat."

"Have you a stateroom?" he asked abruptly. He seemed to make the question answer something which Ruth had spoken to him before I came in.

"No. I was not sure I'd get my business done in time to go."

"I'll get you one." Without a glance at Ruth he walked out of the restaurant and left Ruth and me together.

TOMORROW—The letter continued A thwarted elopement.

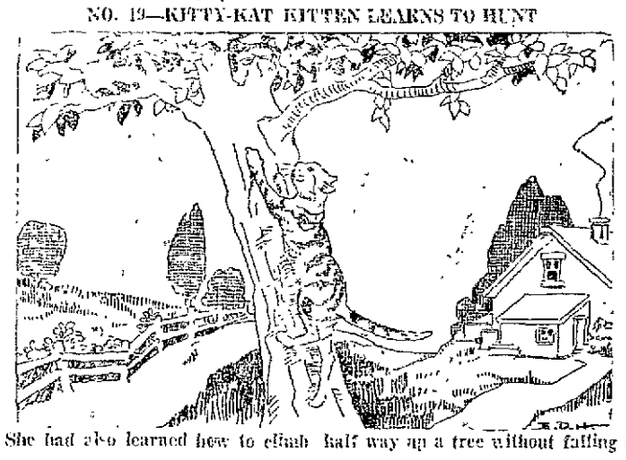
Less Embroidery

Embroidery is being used more sparingly this season than in the ones just preceding, but with much more distinction. It appears most frequently in bands, or in combination with rhinestones or colored beads.

Adventures of The Twins

By Olive Roberts Barton

NO. 19—KITTY-KAT KITTEN LEARNS TO HUNT



She had also learned how to climb half way up a tree without falling off.

Kitty-Kat Kitten was a soft ball of fur. She looked like silk and felt like silk, all but her claws—and they looked and felt like sharp curved needles.

She was very proud of her claws, Kitty-Kat was, because she was just learning how to use them. Her mother, Missez Tabby, had showed her.

Besides, she had sat for hours and watched Thomas Mouser at work.

She had learned how to flatten herself out on the ground like he did, and crawl along on her tummy, without anybody seeing her.

And she had also learned how to climb half way up a tree without falling off. And she had learned to use her eyes, too! One minute they would be like large blue moons, and the next minute they would look like bits of green steel with slits in them, especially if she saw a bird or a mouse.

What she would have done with them had she caught either one, goodness only knows, because she was too little to eat anything but milk.

One day Nancy and Nick and Mister Dodger, the fairyman, were walking through Squealy-Moo Land to see if everything was safe and sound, when they came across Kitty-Kat Kitten in a stubble field, crouching down between the rows of stiff, yellow stalks and looking like a little gray stone.

Mister Dodger pulled the Twins aside. "Watch!" he whispered. "She's after a field-mouse. And if you look over to the old hickory tree, you'll see Missez Owl watching, too!"

Just then Kitty-Kat Kitten began to move, crawling slowly on her stomach toward the old hickory tree.

Missez Owl sat there staring. She couldn't see very well in the day time, but her four babies weren't big enough yet to hunt for their own lunches and she had to catch their mice for them.

All at once she spied the tiny gray figure right under her.

"Aha!" she thought. "There's one now! An unusually large one. I'll have to be quick."

And she swooped down without a sound. In two seconds Kitty-Kat Kitten (for that's who it was) was being carried up to Missez Owl's nest.

"Wiew! Miew!" she called in a tiny frightened voice. "Help!"

Mister Dodger and the Twins were about to climb up and rescue her when there was a flash and Missez Tabby streaked past.

She was up the tree before you could sneeze almost.

And then such a feather scattering and fur-flying as there was for a minute.

But Kitty-Kat Kitten was rescued and brought safely to the ground and the four owl children had no lunch after all.

The strangest part of the whole thing was, that after everything was over, Missez Tabby gave Kitty-Kat Kitten a sound box on the ear.

Your Health

Helping Finicky Eaters

A one-sided unbalanced diet, with a tendency for sweets and non-essential foods, is characteristic of adolescent boys and girls. Parents or those who care for these young people are almost sure to have this condition to deal with sooner or later.

Have you ever thought that perhaps you may have encouraged this one-sided diet habit and not really be aware of the fact? In an unguarded moment when something had happened to disturb the temper or health of sun or laughter you gave way to a whim or the demand of a finicky taste and the damage was done.

This one sided sweet-stuff-and-pickle, diet, with a little taste of everything but not a real meal of anything, leads to underdevelopment, poor digestion, nervousness and anemia. But it can often be cured. It sometimes means heroic treatment, but the end justifies the means in this case.

One thing that is of great value in helping to break this finicky diet is regularity in eating. Have the family together at meals and help the finicky one by taking all the time you need while at table. Don't let the children spoil their appetite and real zest for a meal by encouraging eating between times. Insist on this program gently but firmly.

Some physicians advise eating whenever you are hungry, but it does not work out in a case like this. Try and aid your children to avoid the hurry-up-and-run eating habit, especially at breakfast. The value of a nourishing breakfast to adolescents cannot be overestimated.

It is quite possible to win onesided, finicky eaters of the adolescent period over to normalcy by good example and kind words. Never try to drive or scold a nervous boy or girl into eating food not wanted.

Preparing vegetables either raw or cooked into tempting combinations with other foods is another good bait. Encourage the drinking of water, at least five or six large glasses daily. This promotes good elimination and aids the desire for food.

If this treatment of "get together" fails to produce the desired results, try plain, nutritious food that is to be eaten in common by all or else go without. Hunger is good sauce and may help to solve your problem of catering to finicky eaters.

If everybody in the United States learned to play football we could chase the book agent ragged.

Time Fear

Let me be young O Lord,
Let me be young
As fragile songs that poise
And all unsung.

Or lacking that, put on
The crown of age,
Give me a quiet peace
For heritage.

Let me be young, O Lord,
Or swiftly old,
But touch not strand by strand
My locks of gold.

For terror grips my heart
And I must flee
Far from a middle-aged Complacency.

Let me be young as fields
That spring shall roam—
Or grant me sudden age
And dreams come home.

ATMOSPHERE IN DECORATIONS

Let the table decorations for your Hallowe'en party be as "rustic" as possible. A large pumpkin, used bowl fashion, filled with rosy apples and nuts and grapes, has the merit of being as inexpensive as it is artistic.

If a floral centerpiece is preferred the same pumpkin bowl will be charming filled with autumn leaves and vines. Light the table with candles and use carefully pressed and lettered oak or maple leaves for place cards.

The candle holders offer a chance for quite a bit of originality. Carrots, turnips, apples, potatoes and cabbages can be carved or hollowed out in the center to form holders for candles. Orange shells can be used for tiny Jack O'Lanterns. A large ear of golden field corn can be broken in half and the cob cut away at one end to hold a candle.

Little Cost

Bowls of asters, wild ones, and goldenrods with feathery wild clematis, branches of autumn leaves and stalks of corn can be used effectively throughout the house.

Decorations of this sort could be used for almost any sort of a Hallowe'en party. But if you have in mind a party of ghosts and spooks and witches, decorations of black cats and old women on broomsticks will lend an eerie and suggestive touch.

These silhouettes can be purchased at a five and ten-cent store or made at home. Black card-board paper and a pair of sharp scissors with a paper pattern are the necessary utensils.

Orange and black crepe paper can be fringed and used for shades over the lights, or attractive "transparencies" can be found in the stores.

Bats and owls are effective, cut from black paper and use as shields for side lights. The eyes of the owl can be cut out to let the light shine through, and the veins of the bat's outspread wings and a thin line to mark the shape of his body can be removed with a sharp knife.

Three tiny owls can be pasted together to form individual holders for nuts or candles.

The broom of an old witch can bear the name of a guest for a place card.

A black cat with a humped back and a waving tail can conceal a tiny fortune in a bowl or red or yellow ribbon tied around his cardboard neck.

Black Cat

If there's a member of the family who is clever with a saw, inveigle him into sawing out some rampant black cats from as strong pieces of wood as he can use. Drive a nail in the very tip of pussy's tail and force a big plumber's candle over the nail. The cats of course should have several coats of glossy black paint. The angle of the heads, the hump of the back and the "wave" of the tail can be made most expressive.

the luncheon or supper itself can be

To go back to the table decorations, made so decorative that aside from place cards and a centerpiece, additional favors are unnecessary.

Bright red apple cups filled with salad are most attractive. Golden oranges filled with dessert rival the most expensive molded ice. Jolly little round pumpkin-yellow cakes with a surprise in the center are vastly more fun than the most elaborate of "crackers."

To remove the fingerprints that accumulate on the doorway, use a clean cloth dipped in kerosene, then wipe with a cloth wrung out of hot water.

Glossy Fern

Wet the earth around ferns every three or four weeks with water to which a little ammonia has been added. This will keep them glossy and green. A teaspoonful to a quart is enough.

Flowers Revived

An aspirin tablet added to the water in which cut flowers are kept will revive them if they have begun to wilt.

Drying Stockings

When hanging clothes to dry, hang stockings by the toes and they will not get out of shape.

Kid Kept Soft

To keep kid gloves soft, put them into a tin box with a lump of ammonia wrapped tightly in a flannel.

Stains On Silver

A dry cork will remove stains from plate or silverware without scratching the metal.

Indelible Ink

When indelible ink stains resist resist every other treatment they often succumb to a mixture of equal parts of turpentine and ammonia.

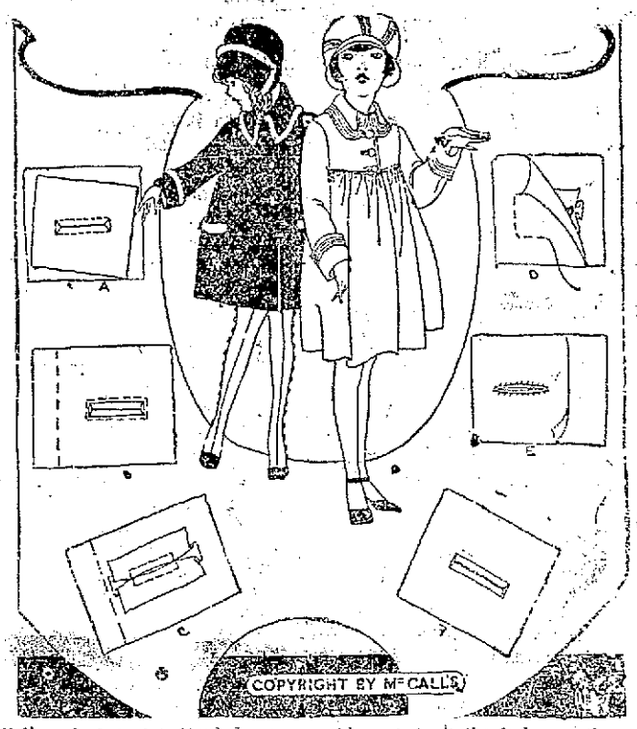
Bound Buttonholes Are Decoration to the Dress



Well made bound buttonholes are a real decoration to a dress, often the only trimming in these days of simple, smartly cut gowns. These buttonholes are easy to make if care is taken from the first step.

First mark the place for the buttonholes on the garment with a thread. On the right side baste a piece of material (the facing) over the buttonhole mark. Place this material right side down. A true bias is generally used as it makes a flatter buttonhole.

An easy way to make sure all the buttonholes are exactly alike in size is to draw lines representing the buttonhole on a piece of paper and baste this paper mark to the wrong side of the buttonhole.

Stitch around the buttonhole on the lines on the paper as shown in Figure A, about one-eighth of an inch either side of the center. Cut through the center to within one-eighth of an inch of the ends and cut diagonally to each corner.

Remove the paper on the wrong side and draw the facing on the right side through the opening to the wrong side to form a binding. Draw each end back close to the stitching and baste this facing in place, basting from the right side to keep an even width binding. Figure B.

Figure C shows the wrong side as basted. Tiny pleats are formed at each end of the buttonhole by the facing. The buttonhole facing should be trimmed and carefully pressed at this stage.

Figure D shows the edge of the garment turned back to cover the buttonholes and form an underfacing. Turn the edge on the basted line and baste around each buttonhole to hold it in place. Cut through the underfacing for each buttonhole, and hem turning the edges in with the point of the needle as the hemming is done (Figure E). The underfacing should not be sewed down to the dress; the buttonholes hold it in place.

BRING IN LATE ANNUALS

The real garden lover is never without one. When winter approaches she makes her first indoor garden of the season by using the late annuals from outdoors.

Pots of French marigolds, taken from outdoor garden before frost, old-fashioned balsams, sweet alyssum, giant candytuft will cheer up the living rooms for several weeks. They should be watered before they get too dry, and showered often.

Pots of seedlings of annuals are very satisfactory for winter garden. Start the seeds early enough in the season to insure well-grown plants at the time of bringing them into the house.

Chiffon Velvet

Very thin white chiffon velvet is to be very popular this year for wedding gowns, and naturally this luxurious material needs little in the way of trimming.

ENFORCING DRY LAW FOR LOCAL OFFICERS

Carolina each adopted a new code, incorporating substantially the National Prohibition Act and Massachusetts adopted a code, subject to referendum.

"It is desired that many of the laws which have proved of especial benefit in some states be uniformly adopted, and laws which make the buyer as well as the seller amenable, and which provide for the forfeiture of citizenship papers or deportation of foreign violators, and uniform extradition for violators, standardization of essential evidence, be enacted.

"The problems arising under the Harrison Narcotic Law which is also administered by Commissioner Haynes, will be considered at the conference of governors. Inter-state, national and international aspects of the problem will be considered."

JUDGE J. L. MANRING IS IN RACE TO FINISH

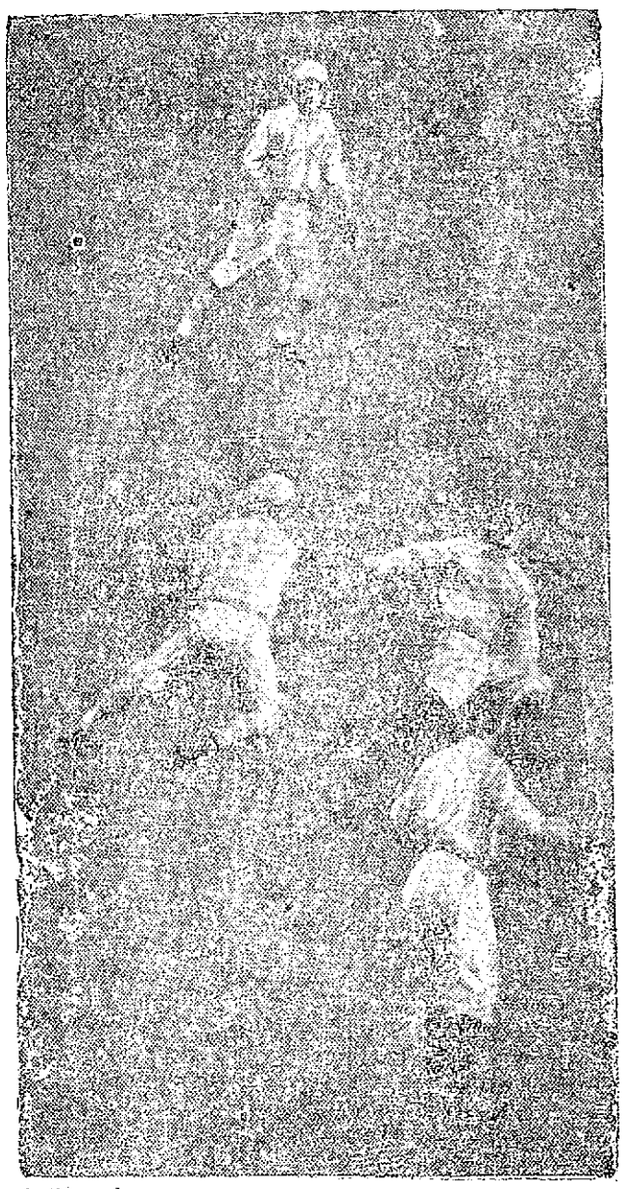
co-operation to the extent of my power, and insist that business be not hampered and restricted by unnecessary regulations, and ordinances. I have been accused of being a capitalist, but if I have any money I can lay my hand on my heart and call God to witness that I have never made a dollar of it at the expense of the city of Middlesboro. In every office which I have held, since becoming a citizen of this place, I have made it an invariable rule to donate the entire salary it carried, to charity, and in addition, have given much more than that salary for charitable purposes. I am not asking the citizens to reward me by voting for me on this account. If they do not want me to serve as council knows, have not faith in my business ability, honesty and integrity sufficient to be willing to commit a part of the city's financial interest, and their warrants into my hands, and do not want me to serve, I have no desire to serve, as my sole aim as commissioner would be to forward their interests and improve conditions.

"Some of the candidates may promise more than I, but the best of a promise lies in its fulfillment, and I never believe in promising more than I feel that I can perform. The promise to lower the rate of taxation, and at the same time increase the appropriations for schools, street improvement, charitable purposes, and other needs of the city, is absurd on the face of it. The best and only way to lower taxes is to make the city so desirable a place of residence, through its schools, churches and civic improvements, that people will come in and enlarge and increase the taxable amount of property to such an extent that a lower tax levy will secure sufficient funds for the city's needs. I believe that it is the duty of every citizen to take an interest in the manner in which our county, city and other affairs are conducted, and see that men are elected to office who have the real interests of the city at heart. The men elected to office will have the spending of the money collected by taxation, in which the poorest bears his part, and that alone, should be sufficient reason for every resident of the city taking an interest, and active part, in public matters.

"Again I repeat, even at the risk of being tiresome from repetition, that I am in favor of law and order; the lowest possible rate of taxation that will yield sufficient funds, which are to be wisely expended, so as to keep the city's necessary expenses within it; lowering of the present high standard of our schools and other institutions. I favor the appointment of a police in the office, to greatly increase the constantly increasing number of motor vehicles, and for strict enforcement of law and city ordinances as long as they remain in force. If contrary to the sense of the people, they should be repealed, not violated."

Overthrow That Helped Overthrow the Giants



To win the world championship from the Giants the Yankees produced an amazing flare-up in the eighth inning of the final game, the net result of which was five runs and victory. This shows a bit of action in the inning Bob Meusel's single has just sent the tying and winning runs over. Dugan is going into third on the hit. Cunningham, returning the ball from center field, has thrown wildly. Dugan, making a mental note of the overthrow, leaps up and continues on his way to the plate with the run that made victory doubly sure.

FEMININE STAFF OPERATES SAVINGS AND LOAN COMPANY

By Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 18.—What is believed to be the first business and loan company to be operated by a personnel entirely feminine, the Women's Savings & Loan Company, has just opened new offices in the Women's City Club building, the first building to be planned and financed here by a women's organization. The company was organized in January, 1922, by 15 women, and now claims assets of more than $150,000. It has 700 stockholders.

All officers of the company, as well as its directors and sales force, are women. However, its biggest client-side is said to be among men. Decorations of the new offices include one feminine touch, some attractive paintings, but the rest of the office atmosphere is very businesslike, with gray walls and heavy mahogany furniture.

MORE ACTIVE GOVERNMENT AID URGED FOR DISABLED VETERANS

CINCINNATI, Oct. 18.—America's wounded and disabled veterans of the World War can be converted "from a liability to the United States government in the matter of dollars and cents" into a group of assets, if rapid and effective means of assisting these disabled veterans in their problems of education, rehabilitation, vocations and welfare are adopted by the government, according to James G. McFarland, national head of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War.

Mr. McFarland is assisting in preparations for "National Forget-Me-Not Day," to be observed throughout the United States, on Saturday, November 10. He asserts that the government should display a more intimate and fatherly interest in the futures of several thousand of America's wounded veterans.
